OVERVIEW

Alexander C. Jurado is a Partner in the San Francisco office of GRSM and is a member of the Construction practice group. He represents clients in both residential and commercial construction defect cases. Prior to joining GRSM, Alexander represented residential and commercial builders and developers in complex, multi-party construction defect matters. He has experience handling Mechanic's Lien cases, having represented developers, contractors, and homeowners through the lien foreclosure process.

Alexander graduated from Loyola Law School in 2017, where he focused his studies on Property Law, Contractual Disputes, and Civil Litigation. He received his undergraduate degree from Loyola Marymount University, where he majored in History. When he is not practicing, Alexander enjoys golf, board games, baseball, and reading.
