OVERVIEW

John Robinson serves as Co-Managing Partner of the Hartford office and opened the Boston office for the firm. He also manages the firm's offices in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. While he is admitted to practice in both Massachusetts and Connecticut, he regularly litigates throughout New England and nationwide. John has substantial experience in handling complex litigation, complex commercial litigation, and class action litigation matters. John possesses deep experience in the defense of wide-scale mass tort litigation, including representing individual doctors in the Nationwide MDL opioid litigation.

John is the Co-Chair of the firm's Product & Tort Liability practice group. He strives and commits himself to being immediately responsive to clients, crafting solutions around clients' needs, and presenting those clients with no surprises. He is happy to provide references, upon request, regarding this commitment over decades of practice.

John has extensive experience in handling toxic tort personal injury and property damage litigation, catastrophic personal injury matters, complex products liability matters, commercial litigation, and drug and medical device litigation. He has successfully defended numerous class actions and handled unfair trade practices and consumer fraud litigation. He counsels clients on product safety issues and risk management and tries cases substantially or to verdict in various jurisdictions. He has successfully defeated class certification, successfully defended product liability class actions, and has resolved (pre-class certification) proposed product liability class action litigation. He has extensive experience in defending fire and explosion loss litigation.

As primary trial counsel and consulting counsel for the Mid-Atlantic and New England regions, he assists a corporate parent to hundreds of manufacturing subsidiaries with its products liability matters. He also acts as primary consulting counsel, nationally, for a client in the asbestos litigation, and as its trial counsel in New England. In this capacity, he coordinates discovery in all cases nationwide and addresses global litigation strategy with the client and with local counsel. He coordinates experts, the handling of complex legal issues, and the defense of its corporate representatives.

John also served as national counsel for two other defendants in toxic tort litigation with responsibility for managing large regions at the time. In that capacity, he handled cases in California, Hawaii, Washington, Colorado, Utah, Oregon, Arizona, Delaware, Maryland, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and Maine, regularly appearing in court in many of those jurisdictions. As a result, he has significant litigation management experience on a national level in mass toxic tort litigation.

In 2002, the Connecticut asbestos defense bar selected John as Defense Liaison Coordinating Counsel for the Connecticut asbestos litigation, and he continues to serve in that role to this day. He is responsible for coordinating with the court and all Plaintiffs' counsel regarding docket management, trial settings, discovery, medical workup, motion practice, and trial preparation.

REPRESENTATIVE EXPERIENCE

- Successfully represented, resulting in dismissal of all claims, multiple paper mill owners in federal court class action in Maine, where plaintiffs alleged that the Mills' discharge of residual PFAS substances into surface water, onto lands and into the wastewater system, contaminated bio-solids spread as fertilizer. Plaintiffs allege this resulted in further PFAS contamination of their groundwater and property, causing serious health risks and property damage.
- Represents client nationally with respect to explosion and fire loss litigation.
- Represented multiple paper mills in multiple plaintiff action in Maine Superior Court. Allegations very similar to above class-action resulting again in dismissal.
- Tried fitness industry personal injury case to recent defense verdict in Massachusetts.
- Recently tried elevator industry case to near verdict dismissal/successful resolution in Connecticut.
- Secured dismissal with prejudice (with no settlement) on behalf of a designer and manufacturer of boilers and other power generation equipment in a $40-million lawsuit brought pursuant to the Connecticut Product Liability Act wherein a utility that serves the northeast alleged that defects in the client's product caused damage to its power plant's turbines and related equipment. John was the head of a defense team which succeeded in securing outright dismissal at the close of fact and expert discovery, after the filing of various Daubert motions and a motion for summary judgment.
- Turek, et al. v. United Technologies Corp., HHD-CV14-6053742-S (Conn.Super.) (awarded non-suit judgment for discovery violations in multi-plaintiff matter involving alleged hexavalent chromium exposure).
- Represented clients in numerous commercial litigation matters ranging from broker/dealer securities class action litigation, securities fraud litigation, insurance broker/dealer litigation, and other commercial disputes.
- Currently defending aerospace anti-poach class action litigation in Connecticut District Court on behalf of engineering and manufacturing company.
- Represented manufacturer of blood oxygenator in defense of wrongful death claim brought on behalf of the estate of the then 53-year-old director of Yale University's psychology department.
- Represented a state university and public works department in the northeast in a $20-million multi-party matter alleging defective design and construction of the library on the university's law school campus.
- Defended thousands of mass/toxic tort claims throughout career including thousands of living malignancy and wrongful death claims.
