OVERVIEW

Laegan Meyers focuses on civil and construction litigation and has additional experience in government contracts and regulatory compliance. Before joining the firm, she clerked for Chief Judge David Gratton at the Idaho Court of Appeals and externed for Judge Winmill at the U.S. District Court for the District of Idaho, gaining valuable insight into appellate and federal practice.

Her legal background includes working with nonprofit organizations that were federal grant recipients, providing her with firsthand experience in government contracts and compliance requirements. Laegan also interned with the Ada County Prosecutor's Office, further expanding her practical litigation skills. She earned her J.D. from the University of Idaho College of Law, where she was a National Moot Court Team member and runner-up in the McNichols Oral Argument Competition.

Before attending law school, Laegan served as a Victim Services Coordinator with the RCMP in Saskatchewan, Canada, primarily assisting First Nation communities. She also holds a master's degree from the University of Alaska. Raised in Alaska and having worked as a cattle farmer in Canada, she brings resilience and a unique perspective to her practice. Outside of work, Laegan is actively involved with Idaho Women Lawyers and enjoys exploring the outdoors with her husband and their two children. Her diverse experiences, both professional and personal, make her a dynamic advocate and a valuable asset to the GRSM team.
